

ALEXANDRIA.

SATURDAY EVENING, JUNE 29.

Neither the President nor the Secretary of State have at all distinguished themselves by speech making during the late visit to the North. The President took care to abstain from current party politics, reiterated simply his former opinions in favor of union, peace and reconciliation, urged good feeling and "restoration," and returned his thanks everywhere for the courtesies and hospitalities extended to him. The most noticeable speech of Mr. Seward was the one in which he gave Massachusetts an extra flourish-which, considering the estimation in which he is, at this present time, held in Massachusetts, and what that State is doing in opposition to his expressed views and feelings, must be considered a remarkable evidence of "returning good for evil" -and praising those who "dispitefully" use, or rather, abuse us. Among the prizes awarded at the Paris Exposition are Gold Medals, to Cyrus W. Field of New York, for the promotion of the system of ocean telegraphing; to Steinway & Sons of New York, and Checkering & Sons of Boston and New York, for pianos; to C. H. McCormick of Chicago, for mowing machines; to Wheeler & Wilson, of New York City, for sewing machines; Elias Howe, of New York for invention of sewing machines; Grant Loco motive Works, of Paterson, N. J., for locomotive steam engine; J. M. Humphries, of Ten nessee, for cotton; F. C. Williams, of Richmond, Va., for tobacco; J. P. Sarrazire, of Louisiana, for perrique tobacco.

Schofield, suggested that Its directors refused to prefer these depositors all the small cemeteries on the peninsula and in the vicinities of Norfolk, Portsmouth and Suffolk should be broken up and the bodies of the soldiers who fell on the peninsula and on the South Side, be re-interred in one National Cemetery, which it is proposed to establish between Fortress Monroe and Hampton.

The question is asked-"if Andrew Jackson were alive, and to have a member of his Cabi net in opposition to him as Mr. Stanton is to the present administration, or a Commanding General like General Sheridan writing such a letter as was recently written to General Grant, would he retain the one in the Cabinet, or the other in his post?" Certainly, everybody knows he would not. But then Andrew Jackson is not alive.

THE PRESIDENT was most kindly and hospitably received by the authorities and citizens of Baltimore, yesterday. At the earnest call of the citizens he made a short speech. He and his suite, in company with the Governor of Maryland, will visit Annapolis to-day, at the invitation of the Maryland Convention. He will return to Washington this afternoon.

Mr. Wm. W. Fort Wallace, Kansas, was attacked on the 26th by a body of about four hundred Indians, the garrison consisting of forty men, belonging to the Third infantry and Seventh cavalry, under command of Lieutenant Hale. Sergeant Dummel and private Bacon, of the Seventh cavalry, and privates Woldroff and McNally, of the Third infantry, were killed. John Haney and George Gaffney, of the Seventh cav alry, and Joseph Winehouse and Patrick Mc-Carty, of the Third infantry, were mortally wounded. A number of horses and mules were also killed. The Indians lost twenty of their number, and after a hard fight were driven back.

TRIAL OF SURRATT. - Nothing new was developed on the Surratt trial yesterday, except the introduction of two letters written in 1864, by Surratt to Weichman, neither of which have been heretofore published, but which have no special bearing upon the case on trial. Weichman's examination in chief closed at half-past one, and the defence then took him in hand, but did not proceed very far. The defence asked him a number of questions, mainly for the purpose of testing his power of memory, and he was questioned also as to certain allegations said to have been made by him at various times, with a view of contradicting him in the future. He was asked also to reconcile certain discrepancies between his testimony as now given and that given at the trial at the Arsenal. His recollection seems to be perfectly clear upon all points bearing against Surratt, but he does not so well recollect any circumstance in favor of the prisoner or his mother. It is expected that the cross-examination of Weichman will occupy all of to-day, and probably a longer period. - Cor. Balt. Sun.

VIRGINIA NEWS.

A case of considerable importance comes up before the Circuit Court of Mecklenburg county at its present term, involving the writ of ha beas corpus. Mr. E. A. Pollard has applied to this court for the issuing of the above writ requiring the production of the children of the former Mrs. Dowell, whom he recently married. It seems that the present Mrs. Pollard was a short time before the end of the war divorced from Mr. Dowell. Pollard now claims the children of Dowell under this writ, although the decree divorcing him from his (Dowell's) former wife, entrusted him with the custody but few ideas of the manners and customs o and care of the children.

A. L. & H. R. R. TO MERCER'S STATION -The completion of this road to Mercer' depot will depend entirely upon those whom its completion to that point is designed to benefit. The stock holders at their last meeting, adopted a resolution, proposing borrowing hundred and seventy-one pupils. thirty thousand dollars, upon which it will pay 7.30 per cent interest, to complete the road to that point. This money will not be subscribed intendent of the Treasury Extension having as stock, but will be a loan to the company, which will be secured by the property of the road, and its earnings each year, until it is all paid. The investment will be safe, and the interest, more than funds will command at the old rate. The proceeds of the company, after paying the expense of the road, will pay principal and interest of the amount authorized to be borrowed, in four or five years. The road the eastern section of the city. from Alexandria to Leesburg is a sufficient guarantee for the redemption of the obligations of the company for that amount. There can be no question of its payment; and to those who have funds to loan, a better investment litical stamina of the cause. The Sunday could not be made. To reach that point is very desirable, to command all the trade of Loudoun and to turn the products of our rich and productive county into its proper channel, by contributing to the trade of Alexandria .-The energy and perseverance of the President of this company in completing this work to Leesburg, apparently without aid or money, should be met by a liberal spirit upon the part of our people in carrying the work farther into the country. LETTER FROM MISSOURI.

[Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette.] BOWLING GREEN, Mo., June 22 .- A friend in Virginia has lately sent me some numbers of the Alexandria Gazette; and whilst reading them my mind has been turned towards the home of my childhood, and all the scenes of my early life, have been vividly re-called. How well do I remember the time when I turned away from the loved soil of Virginia, and the old homestead, to seek fortune and friends in the West. It was nine years ago, and I was but nineteen years of age, a beardless boy, with the world. But all my hardships and trials have been lightened, and my sorrows extenuated, by the fond recollections of the past. can now recollect Fairfax of the olden time, before war laid its devastating hand upon her. How I loved to wander beside the clear pellucid streams, to stroll through the woodlands, climb over the hills; and more than all these, how I loved the warm hearted, generous peo ple who lived there! Alas! Fairfax of the present time is not Fairfax of the olden time. The blood red tide of battle rolled down her hillsides, along her ravines, and over her fields, while the "red lightning of war" threw its fierce glare across the highway of destruction and ruin, and lighted thousands along the journey of death. Many of the friends of my youth went down in the tide, and never rose again to cheer the hearts of parents and friends with their presence. And though the war now over, and a quasi peace restored, all changed. Poverty sits where wealth revelled; mourning rules where cheerfulness triumphed, and a grief stricken people wander where light hearted joyous ones once lived. love Virginia, and no circumstances can ever sever that feeling of affection. But I love the West too. The broad plains here, which roll in gentle undulations far away to the utmost on Mr. Brower, at Milford, Caroline county, limit of the vision, dotted here and there with running steams and groves, are far more beau tiful (though not more dear) than the rugged roughened hillsides of Virginia; the skies are just as blue as Italy's, the breezes as cooling as those from the ocean, the splendid yield of agpeople (with some exceptions) are just as much refined, take as much interest in education, and are as warm hearted and generous as any people in the world; churches and school houses are numerous throughout the State, and are well patronized; railroads are being built, and our town will soon be blessed with both a railroad and telegraph line. The health of the country is excellent, and while the poor farmer can work and live, the best of physicians will have but little to do, especially at this season of the year. Land ranges from $10 to $75 per acre. All these advantages considered, no State offers so many inducements to emigrant as Missouri. There is one seeming apparent drawback to the rapid improvement of the State. It is Radicalism. The radicals of no State, perhaps, have manifested such diabolism when the great majority of the people lay prostrate under an unjust rule of force they have since continued to override justice and right, and by robbing the people of their rights, managed to hold the reins of power; and yet three fourths of the State are conservatives .-The next election will redeem Missouri, and save the people from further degradation. The Tennessee Railroad. He will be a candidate Even now the banner advances, and with the motto, "Peace on earth and good will towards men," why will they not triumph? And when that happy event reaches consummation; when contentment shall spread its bright wings over all the land; when the harvest shall be merry, the present joyous, and the future bright with promise; when all this shall transpire under conservative management, will we not pleased with the joyousness of the present, that we will ever hold on to and maintain those principles. This article is already too long, and I will close by tendering my heartfelt love and sympathy to my dear suffering friends of Virginia. More anom. Yours, truly, J. N. Gibson, M. D.

Sumac may be gathered any time from the 1st of July until frost. Any gathered after frost turns red, and is worthless. It should be cured as much as possible in the shade and under shelter, to preserve its color and strength, and when as dry as fodder, and the leaf stems crack readily under the fingers, carefully threshed out on a plank or sheet; after which, the stems, sticks, and berries, are raked and picked out, leaving only the leaves and leaf-twigs to be sent to market. It should be gathered in dry weather only, and must be kept dry whilst curing, or it will spoil. It may be gathered by stripping off the leaf-twigs in the same way that corn is stripped in making todder, or the small branches may be cut off, them in the best order, if the supervisors or and after the leaves are cured and threshed off, raked out. He says, however, that experience has shown, that a new class of laborers will have to be introduced before the large crops of former years can any where in the South, be realized. He says that Coolies in Louisiana, have been tried with success. His idea is that the colored people, under present circumstances, "are so easily satisfied, that they will not apply themselves to steady work."

At his residence, CLAY HILL, Clarke county Va. on the 14th inst., FRANCIS BEVERLY WHITING, esq., in the 83d year of his age.— If a clear and discriminating mind and sound judgment, united with an honesty of purpose and bravery in the discharge of duty, constituted the requisite qualification for the proper discharge of the office of a Justice of the Peace, there is then a full warrant for the claim of Mr. Whiting's eminent fitness for this office, whose duties he so long and faithfully fulfilled; -beth in the county of Frederick, and of Clarke after its separation from that county. This was an office, peculiarly to him, one of honor, as the only emolument attached to the office at the time be held it, he declined to accept, thus for years discharging its arduous duties without any other reward, than a mind conscious of the rectitude of its purpose affords. In relations of husband, father, master, friend and neighbor, he discharged every duty with a winning grace, which springs from a kind and benevolent heart, a frank and ingenuous nature, and love of the truth, and a manly courage; and one impressible with the loveliness of such virtues, cannot fail to be inspired with admiration of the character of him, whose life was the radiant reflex of those ennobling virtues.
